Members interested in these matters should communicate with him at the Library of Congress. The meeting adjourned at 3:50 P.M.

Members of the Society were guests of the University of Pennsylvania at a reception held in the University Museum from 4 to 6 P.M.

THE BUSINESS MEETING was called to order by President Emeneau at 9:30 A.M. on Wednesday, December 28. The minutes of the preceding meetings were called for. The Secretary stated that the minutes of the Tenth Summer Meeting held at Ann Arbor on July 30-31, 1948, and of the Twenty-Third Annual Meeting held in New York on December 30-31, 1948, had already been printed in Bulletin 22, which would soon be mailed to members of the Society. On motion, it was voted that the reading of these minutes be dispensed with and that they be adopted.

The Secretary, Mr. Cowan, presented the following report, which was ordered to be received and filed:

The membership statistics are as follows. Starting 1948 there were 728 members, apart from Honorary Members, of whom three died during the year (George O. Curme, Herbert H. Vaughan, and Francis A. Wood); 13 presented their resignations, one effective at the end of 1946 (Erik Ohlsson, erroneously carried in the List of Members as Chlsson), two at the end of 1947 (Myles Dillon, Ralph W. Weiman), and ten at the end of 1948 (Karl Buehler, John R. Glassy, Warren F. Manning, Lewis A. Ondis, Edith M. Proctor, R. Promberger, Laurence Pumpelly, F. W. Strothmann, Charles W. Tait, Henrietta Tiehy); 16 were dropped for non-payment of dues in 1947 and 1948. The net membership with which the Society started 1949 was therefore 696; the increase in membership for 1949 is 97 (92 new members and 5 reinstated). The total membership for 1949, apart from Honorary Members, is 793, a gain of 65 as compared with 1948. There were 20 names on the list of Honorary Members at the beginning of 1948, of whom one died in 1948, leaving 19 at the end of 1948; three new members were added at the Annual Meeting in 1948, making a total of 22 to begin 1949. We regretfully record the death of six members during the year: Leonard Bloomfield on April 18, Rev. John M. Cooper on May 21, William Kurath on March 9, Warner F. Patterson on February 5, Robert Morris Pierce on August 28, and Lester M. Prindle on February 14.

The domestic Library Subscriptions have increased from 156 to 167 by a gain of 12 and a loss of 1; foreign subscriptions have increased from 139 to 147 by a gain of 8 and a loss of 20.

As Treasurer, Mr. Cowan presented and discussed the following report:

Yamagiwa, Robert A. Hall jr. as proxy for Eugene A. Nida, and J. M. Cowan (Secretary); also, by constitutional provision but without vote, Edgar H. Sturtevant, E. Adelaide Hahn, Hans Kurath, and Otto Springer, and Bernard Bloch by invitation. The Committee informally considered reports of officers and committees, and elected to membership additional new members for 1949. The Committee met again at 8 P.M. in the Penn Sheraton Hotel. Present were those named above and also, by constitutional provision but without vote, Franklin Edgerton, George M. Bolling, and W. Freeman Twaddell. The Committee took the following actions: discharged the Committee on Honorary Members (Hans Kurath, Roland G. Kent, George A. Kennedy) with a vote of thanks, and appointed Konstantin Reichardt (chairman), Urban T. Holmes jr., and Y. R. Chao to serve on this Committee for 1950; determined that the next annual meeting will be held in Chicago, with December 28, 29, and 30 as tentative dates; instructed the Secretary to issue the call for the annual meeting not later than September 15, with a deadline of October 15 for the submission of abstracts, so that the Executive Committee will be able to make a selection of papers to be included in the program not later than November 1; appointed W. Freeman Twaddell as delegate to the ACLS for the year 1951; continued the Committee on the Collitz Bequest (Edward H. Sehrt, chairman; Franklin Edgerton, Kemp Malone, Taylor Starck, W. Freeman Twaddell); continued the Advisory Committee on the Investment of Linguistic Institute Endowment (Albert C. Baugh, Henning Larsen, Edward H. Sehrt, Edwin B. Williams); appointed Harry Hoijer to the Standing Committee on Research (George S. Lane through 1951, chairman; Henry M. Hoenigswald through 1950) to serve through 1952, replacing Hans Kurath, to whom thanks were expressed for his service on this Committee; continued the Committee on the Free List (Otto Springer, chairman; Einar Haugen, Henry M. Hoenigswald, Roman Jakobson, Yakov Malkiel); and appointed George S. Lane to serve on the Committee on the Place of the Linguistic Institute through August 1, 1952 (Harry Hoijer through Aug. 1, 1951, chairman; Charles C. Fries through Aug. 1, 1950). The Committee considered other matters at both its sessions, but took no official action on them.

The Executive Committee presents the following recommendation to the Society for approval: that Cary F. Jacob, a Foundation Member, be relieved from further payment of annual dues without loss of any of the privileges of active membership.

This report was ordered to be received and filed. The recommendation of the Executive Committee pertaining to Cary F. Jacob was unanimously approved.

Mr. Bloch, Editor and Chairman of the Society's Committee on Publications, presented the following report, which was ordered to be received and filed:

During the year 1949 the Society issued only two publications:

LANGUAGE, Vol. 25; 446 pages;

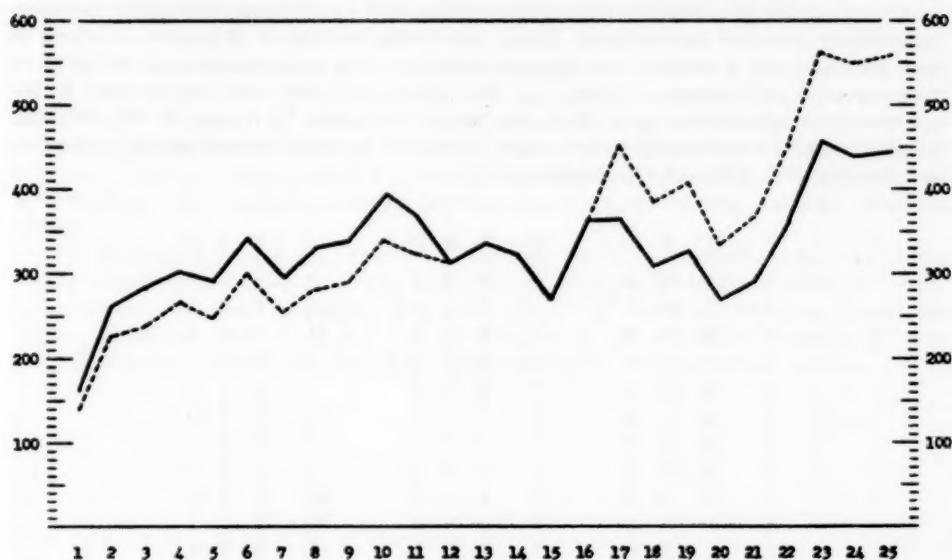

Bulletin No. 22; 55 pages.

From time to time, in these annual reports, I have presented statistics that I thought might be of interest to members of the Society. The present report, my tenth, marks the end of the Society's twenty-fifth year, and seems to me a proper occasion for a statistical summary of the Society's publications.

One measure of the Society's growth is the growth in the size of our journal. In spite of an occasional decrease in size from one year to the next, the main trend in the bulk of LANGUAGE has been upward; the current volume is nearly four times as large as the first. The following tabulation shows for each volume of LANGUAGE the actual number of pages published and an adjusted number to facilitate comparison. Up to 1936, the proceedings of the Society's meetings and the annual membership lists were printed in the journal; from 1936 on, this material has been accommodated in the Bulletins of the Executive Committee. Accordingly, the adjusted number of pages for Volumes 1-11 is obtained by subtracting from the total the number of pages occupied by the proceedings and the membership list. In 1941, the format of the journal was changed so as to increase the size of the type-page by approximately one fourth: four pages in the new format are equivalent to five in the old. The adjusted number of pages for Volumes 17-25 is therefore obtained by multiplying the actual number by 1.25. (For Volumes 12-16, the actual number and the adjusted number are the same.)

VOLUME	PAGES		VOLUME	PAGES
	ACTUAL	ADJUSTED		ACTUAL	ADJUSTED
1 (1925)	162	146	16 (1940)	359	359
2 (1926)	258	226	17 (1941)	364	450
3 (1927)	279	241	18 (1942)	309	386
4 (1928)	302	266	19 (1943)	328	410
5 (1929)	291	251	20 (1944)	270	337
6 (1930)	342	301	21 (1945)	293	366
7 (1931)	297	254	22 (1946)	360	450
8 (1932)	329	278	23 (1947)	454	567
9 (1933)	337	290	24 (1948)	441	551
10 (1934)	394	342	25 (1949)	446	557
11 (1935)	368	324
12 (1936)	313	313
13 (1937)	335	335
14 (1938)	323	323
15 (1939)	271	271

The data presented in the foregoing tabulation are graphically repeated in the accompanying chart. The figures 1 to 25 across the bottom denote volumes of the journal; vertical calibrations refer to the number of pages. Changes in the actual number of pages are plotted by a solid line; changes in the adjusted number are plotted by a broken line. (For Volumes 12-16 the two lines coincide.)

The next tabulation shows the total number of contributions—for LANGUAGE and for our several series of book-length publications—that have come to me during my ten years as Editor, together with certain subdivisions. (I am unable to give the corresponding figures for the first fifteen years of the Society, since I have never seen Bolling's records.)

The 662 contributions to LANGUAGE that the Editor was called upon to judge were submitted by 211 different authors. Of these, 114 (or 54%) had all their contributions accepted; 45 (or about 21%) had some but not all of their contributions accepted; and 52 (or about 25%) had none of their contributions accepted. The following tabulation shows how many papers, both articles and reviews, were sent in by various individual authors. Column C shows the number of contributors involved; column T shows the total number of papers submitted by each of them; columns A and D show the number of papers respectively accepted and declined. (Thus, one author submitted 26 papers, of which 23 were accepted and 3 declined; six authors submitted four papers apiece, of which three were accepted and one was declined.) In this tabulation, joint contributions by two co-authors are counted twice; as a result, the totals of columns T, A, and D (681, 541, and 140 respectively) are higher than the actual number of contributions submitted, accepted, and declined (662, 527, and 135 respectively).

The next table shows the distribution of articles (not reviews) in the twenty-five volumes of LANGUAGES so far published. Figures for Volumes 1-15 (edited by George M. Bolling) and for Volumes 16-25 are given separately; combined figures appear at the right. Italic figures indicate percentage. Note that all these figures refer to the number of separate ITEMS published in each field, NOT to the number of pages occupied by these items.

Some of the statistics shown in the preceding table are presented in a different form in the graph below. Here the articles published in LANGUAGE are classified under 14 heads. Each label is followed by three bars, whose length is proportionate to the percentage of articles grouped under this head. Of the three bars in each set, the first refers to Volumes 1-15, the third to Volumes 16-25; the middle bar refers to all twenty-five volumes, and is accordingly intermediate in length between the other two (except when all three are equal).

The headings are arranged, except for the last two, in a descending order according to the length of the middle bar. The label 'Germanic' excludes English; the label 'Italic' excludes the Romance languages. The label 'Other IE' includes Albanian, Armenian, Baltic, Messapic, Tocharian, and Venetic. The label 'Other non-IE' includes all non-Indo-European (or non-Indo-Hittite) languages except the American Indian.

A final table shows how the distribution of topics in Volumes 1-15 compares with the distribution in Volumes 16-25. Articles are again classified under 14 heads, as in the graph above. Each label is followed by three figures. The first denotes the percentage of articles on this topic in Volumes 1-15; the second denotes the percentage of articles on the same topic in Volumes 16-25; the third is the difference between these percentages, always obtained by subtracting the first from the second. Accordingly, a positive number in the third column indicates an increase in the proportion of articles on a given topic; a negative number indicates a decrease.

The differences shown in the table do not reflect any change in editorial policy. Neither Bolling nor I has ever favored one field of linguistics at the expense of another: each article has been accepted or declined on its own merits alone, without reference to the supply of other articles in the same field. If a particular field has been more copiously represented in the journal than another, it is because the number of acceptable contributions in that field has been larger; and if the representation of a field has grown or diminished in the last ten years, it is because the number of productive scholars at work in the field—or at least the number of those who have sent their work to LANGUAGE—has correspondingly changed. Some of the decreases shown in the table can be referred to the founding or the re-establishment of other linguistic journals—notably the International Journal of American Linguistics in 1944, and Word in 1945; far from regretting the rise of competing journals, the Linguistic Society has warmly welcomed them, as evidence that linguistics is a growing science and that an ever larger number of scholars, working from diverse points of view, are engaged upon linguistic problems.

If changes in the distribution of articles require an explanation, three suggestions may be offered. Some of the newly established journals provide an outlet for specialized studies that formerly could have been published only in LANGUAGE. In the field of comparative Indo-European grammar it is inevitable that the continued exploration of the several branches should result from time to time in slight shifts of attention, as scholars turn from one branch or problem to another. The increase in the number of papers devoted to languages outside the Indo-European family undoubtedly reflects the growing interest of American linguists in the description of living languages—an interest that not only proved its validity during the war years but received a new impetus from the success with which it was applied to the practical task of language teaching. This remarkable rise in the proportion of non-Indo-European studies (perhaps also the rise in the proportion of papers on English) reflects a genuine trend; the other changes in distribution can hardly be taken as anything but accidental.

Whatever the true explanation of these changes may be, it is not to be found in any choice on the Editor's part. What I wrote four years ago (Bulletin 19.14) is still true: The proportion of articles and pages in LANGUAGE devoted to a given topic is due to the number and length of acceptable contributions treating the topic, and to nothing else.

No editor of a technical journal works alone. In the course of these ten years I have had the help of many scholars, whose reports on doubtful contributions have guided me in reaching a decision. Not all the papers that I accepted or declined were submitted in this way to others; but every paper that did not strike me as obviously good or obviously bad was read for me by one or more of my colleagues. For their generosity in helping me, for the care with which they examined the contributions that I asked them to read, and for the scrupulous objectivity of their reports, the scholars who have acted as my referees deserve not only my personal thanks but the gratitude of the Linguistic Society as a whole. To list them all would extend this report too far; but I cannot deny myself the pleasure of naming those who have given me their advice on two or more papers—in several cases on many more than two: William M. Austin, Harold H. Bender, Leonard Bloomfield, J. Milton Cowan, Myles Dillon, Isidore Dyen, Franklin Edgerton, Murray B. Emeneau, Albrecht Goetze, Robert A. Hall jr., Henry M. Hoenigswald, Urban T. Holmes jr., Martin Joos, George A. Kennedy, Roland G. Kent, Helge Kokeritz, Hans Kurath, Edgar H. Sturtevant, George L. Trager, W. Freeman Twaddell, Charles F. Voegelin, and Rulon S. Wells.

I take this opportunity to acknowledge again my indebtedness to others who have helped me: to my fellow-members of the Committee on Publications (Albert C. Baugh, Murray B. Emeneau, Robert A. Hall jr., Urban T. Holmes jr., Henry R. Kahane, Hans Kurath, and Kemp Malone) for their advice on matters of general policy; to the Business Manager of our publications—first Roland G. Kent, who smoothed the way for me while I was learning the editor's trade, and later J. Milton Cowan, who has kept the way smooth ever since; and finally to the staff of our printer, the Waverly Press, for their intelligent cooperation and forbearance.

Above all I am grateful to our contributors, the productive scholars whose work it has been my privilege to read and study. They have taught me a great deal; and from my contacts with them, in conversation and correspondence, even in the labor—sometimes the drudgery—of editing their contributions, I have derived more profit than from any other experience during the past ten years. With most of these men and women my relations have been wholly pleasant and, on my side, fruitful; without their stimulation my development as a linguist would have been very much poorer. To all of them, my abiding thanks.

Mr. Kurath, Director of the 1949 Linguistic Institute at the University of Michigan, presented the following report:

The Institute of 1949 was sponsored jointly by the Linguistic Society of America and the University of Michigan. The staff of the Institute consisted of 19 scholars: nine from other universities—Frederic G. Cassidy (Wisconsin), Robert A. Hall jr. (Cornell), Einar Haugen (Wisconsin), Fang-Kuei Li (Visiting Professor, Yale), Stanley S. Newman (New Mexico), Eunice V. Pike (Summer Institute of Linguistics), W. Freeman Twaddell (Brown), Ralph L. Ward (Yale), and Joshua Whatmough (Harvard)—and ten from the University of Michigan—Charles C. Fries, Lawrence B. Kiddle, Hans Kurath, Robert Lado, Henry Nordmeyer, Kenneth L. Pike, Yao Shen, H. Hide Shohara, Norman L. Willey, and Joseph K. Yamagiwa. Joshua Whatmough occupied the Collitz Professorship in the Institute.

Twenty-eight courses were offered, including Principles of Descriptive Linguistics (Hall), Linguistic Geography (Kurath), Field Methods in Linguistics (Newman), Research in Bilingual Communities (Haugen), Pre-Italic and Italic Dialects (Whatmough), Old Saxon (Twaddell), Chinese Phonetics and Phonemics (Li), and American Indian Languages (Newman).

The Institute was well attended. 183 students were enrolled in the Institute courses (193 in 1948). Of these, 75 were enrolled in two or more courses (83 in 1948) and may be assumed to be working for advanced degrees in linguistics.

The fourteen Forum Lectures and the seven Luncheon Conferences were well attended, and the discussions were animated by an admirable spirit. One had the feeling that the structuralists and the historical linguists are getting to understand each other better. Most of the lectures were given by members of the staff, but there were, as in the past, several lectures by especially invited scholars and several by visiting scholars from abroad. The stipends of the special lecturers were paid from the income of the Endowment Fund of the Institute ($396.25).

SPECIAL LECTURES:

- William F. Edgerton (Chicago), The History of Egyptian Adjectives
 R.-M. S. Heffner (Wisconsin), Phonetics at the Crossroads
 A. C. Sekhar (India), Some Characteristic Features of the Dravidian Languages of India

Otto Springer (Pennsylvania), On Defining the Origins of Colonial Speech

LECTURES BY VISITING SCHOLARS:

- A. Willem de Groot (Amsterdam), Structural Linguistics and Syntactic Laws
 Angus McIntosh (Edinburgh), On Planning a Survey of the Dialects of Scotland
 Veikko Väänänen (Helsinki), Some Controversial Points in Vulgar Latin

Professors A. W. de Groot of the University of Amsterdam (co-editor of Lingua), Angus McIntosh of the University of Edinburgh (member of a committee planning a dialect survey of Scotland), and Veikko Väänänen of the University of Helsinki, who came to this country on Fulbright or Rockefeller arrangements, participated in the activities of the Institute for several weeks. We enjoyed having them with us. They felt that the Institute offers an excellent opportunity to observe American linguists in action and to get acquainted with their points of view.

Through its Committee on the Language Program, the American Council of Learned Societies again provided $3,000 for fellowships and scholarships in the Institute. The following awards were made by the ACLS on recommendation of the Administrative Committee of the Linguistic Institute:

Post-doctoral Fellowships:

- W. R. Barrett, Ph.D. 1948, University of North Carolina (Germanics); Assistant Professor of German, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina
 W. E. Bull, Ph.D. 1940, University of Wisconsin (Romance); Assistant Professor of Spanish, Washington University (now at the University of California)
 T. F. Dunn, Ph.D. 1939, University of Chicago (English); Professor of English and Head of the Department, Drake University

Scholarships:

- W. Bright, A.B. 1948, University of California (American Indian Languages)

 H. L. Titus, M.A. 1941, Harvard University (General Linguistics and Indo-European)
 H. R. Wilson, M.A. University of Toronto (English and Linguistic Geography)

The income from the Collitz bequest, amounting to $1,213.87, and the income from the Endowment Fund of the Institute, amounting to $396.25, were paid over to the University of Michigan by the Society in July. The ACLS did not find it possible to make a contribution to the budget of the Institute of 1949. ($3,000 a year had been made available by the ACLS for this purpose in the four preceeding years.) Aside from the greater part of the salary of the Collitz Professor, the University of Michigan assumed sole responsibility for the salaries of the staff and for current expenses. It is not at all certain that the University can do so in the future without reducing the staff.

Mr. Kurath presented the following report for the Committee on Honorary Members:

The Committee, consisting of Roland G. Kent, George A. Kennedy, and Hans Kurath (chairman), unanimously recommends the election of Theodor Frings, Professor of the German Language and Literature in the University of Leipzig, to honorary membership.

On vote, Professor Frings was unanimously elected an Honorary Member of the Society.

Mr. Twaddell presented the following report as the Society's Delegate to the American Council of Learned Societies:

The Council's activities during the past year have been chiefly aimed at reorganization of its own structure and a new Executive Director's familiarizing himself with his work. This is promising for the future; but it has involved a certain slowing down of Council activities in some fields, including linguistics.

The funds available to the Committee on the Language Program (J. M. Cowan, H. G. Doyle, S. A. Freeman, H. L. Smith jr., W. F. Twaddell; M. Graves) have decreased, and no new grants have been made available as yet. The Language Program of the Council has thus consisted chiefly in terminating the Intensive Language Program; a modest program of scholarships and fellowships to the Linguistic Institute has been continued, on a slightly reduced scale.

Mr. Hoenigswald presented the following slate on behalf of the Nominating Committee (Charles C. Fries [chairman], C. F. Voegelin, Henry M. Hoenigswald):

President: EINAR HAUGEN, University of Wisconsin

Vice-President: FANG-KUEI LI, University of Washington

Secretary-Treasurer: J. MILTON COWAN, Cornell University

Executive Committee (1950-51): ALLEN WALKER READ, Columbia University; and RALPH L. WARD, Yale University

Editor: BERNARD BLOCH, Yale University

Committee on Publications (1950-52): KENNETH L. PIKE, University of Michigan

Nominating Committee (1950-52): W. FREEMAN TWADDELL, Brown University

The Secretary reported that all nominees of the Nominating Committee had signified their willingness to serve if elected, and that no other nominations had been received by mail ballot. The President called for nominations from the floor but there were none. On unanimous vote the Secretary was instructed to cast one ballot for all nominees of the Nominating Committee, who were accordingly declared elected.

The President appointed a Committee on Resolutions consisting of Joshua Whatmough (chairman), William G. Moulton, and André Martinet.

The President then called for other business proposed by members of the Society. Mr. Sturtevant pointed out that an uninvested balance of $1,157.19 is held in an account of the Vedic Variants Series, and stated that he felt it a mistake to leave money idle in such fashion. On his motion it was voted to refer consideration of the investment of the funds in the Vedic Variants Series to the Executive Committee.

Mr. Cross presented the following resolution which, upon vote, was adopted:

WHEREAS the Linguistic Society of America is an association of scholars dedicated to promoting the scientific study of language; and

WHEREAS a necessary condition for the maintenance and development of scholarly activity is the preservation of the best traditional standards of academic freedom and professional rights, guaranteeing scholars from discrimination on account of race, creed, or color and from interference with their private political or civic beliefs:

THEREFORE, be it resolved that the Society affirms its continued faith in academic free-dôm and firmly subscribes to the principle that a scholar professionally should be judged strictly on the basis of ability and performance in his teaching, research, and other professional activities.

THE SECOND SESSION was called to order at 11:30 A.M. by President Emeneau; about 100 persons were present. Papers 8 and 9 were presented and discussed. The session was adjourned at 12:30 P.M.

THE THIRD SESSION was called to order at 2:10 P.M. by President Emeneau; later in the session Mr. Cowan took the Chair. Papers 10-16 were presented and discussed. The session was adjourned at 5 P.M.

The annual informal banquet of the Society was held at 6:30 P.M. in the Ivy Room of Houston Hall, with 90 members and guests attending. After the banquet, President Emeneau, acting as toastmaster, reminded those present that this was, to the day, the 25th anniversary of the Organization Meeting of the Linguistic Society (December 28, 1924). He expressed his gratification at the presence of George Melville Bolling, the first Editor of LANGUAGE, and of Roland G. Kent, the first Secretary-Treasurer of the Society, as well as of several former Presidents. He described some of the major accomplishments of the Society during its first quarter-century, the present prestige of its journal LANGUAGE, and the part played in the Society's development, especially in its earlier days, by the great scholars who were among its first Presidents. President Emeneau concluded by paying tribute to the six men whom the Society has honored with specially dedicated numbers of Language: Carl Darling Buck (Lg. 17:3), Franz Boas (Lg. 17:4), George Melville Bolling (Lg. 18:1), Edgar H. Sturtevant (Lg. 22:2), Leonard Bloomfield (Lg. 24:1), and now Roland G. Kent (Lg. 25:4, thought to be already in the mails).

Mr. Kent, called upon for some remarks on the early history of the Society, spoke informally of the Organization Meeting and the vicissitudes of the first few years. He ended by expressing his confidence in the continued progress and success of the Society as a group of scholars devoted to the advancement of linguistic science.

The President then called upon Mr. Sturtevant, who responded with a moving account of what he called the Society's gestation period—the year from December 1923 to December 1924, during which the possibility of a society devoted wholly to linguistics was first conceived, and the Call for the Organization Meeting was written and sent out. He spoke warmly of George Melville Bolling and Leonard Bloomfield, who formed, with him, the committee which first envisaged the Society and made itself responsible for bringing it to birth; and he called special attention to the brilliant statement of the new Society's aims by Leonard Bloomfield in his article Why a Linguistic Society?, published in the first number of LANGUAGE. Mr. Sturtevant expressed his satisfaction with the achievements of the Society so far, and his hope for the future; and ended by saying that he thought the Society had accomplished the work that Leonard Bloomfield set for it.

The President also saluted Mr. Bolling, and announced that members of the Society would have an opportunity to hear from him at the evening session, which was then about to begin.

THE FOURTH SESSION was called to order at 8:30 P.M. by President Emeneau; about 125 persons were present. Papers 17 and 18 were presented and discussed.
